

A DREAM

Written by: Prof. Dr. U. Durrani

I had a dream. It is a dream yet more real than this seeming reality of time boundedness. Maybe, I had a similar experience when I was 13 or 14: when childhood is flowering out into the beauty of youth. Where all is purity and innocence – when love, for the first time flutters its gentle wings – where love is all idealism and Platonism.

YES IT IS STRANGE – yet not so strange – that early after half a century the experience would be repeated – repeated yes, but with a big difference. In the first instance, it was the purity and innocence of a solitary soul – surging like the waves of a great ocean, in search of a coastline, when it could bow down and pay homage. In the second instance – the present one, in all purity and innocence as before, but like a depth which is beyond the subtlest of emotions.

Now the dream. I was you. Believe me, in body in soul I was you. And that I will relate in my experience through your being. Body and soul. I i.e. you are being married to your spouse. A marriage without any trappings or ceremonials. Call it a spiritual marriage of catholic virgins married to Christ. And yet it had all the realities if the whole being – physical, emotional and spiritual. Like two forms of light, fusing into one another. No words no music, can convey the glory and the ecstasy of this fusion; and this heavenly bliss is surging even now.

Yes, it seldom happens that a perfect complement in any ----- destiny – that the earth part in ----is the complement of the sky part in the other, and the sky part of the other is the complement of the earth part in the one.

God bless this Oneness.
